19. Chlorophyll a and Chlorophyll b are the two main photosynthetic pigments in green plants. They are found in the chloroplasts of green plants. Chlorophyll a is the primary photosynthetic pigment, and chlorophyll b is an accessory pigment. Both pigments absorb light energy and transfer it to the reaction center of the photosystem, where it is used to drive the photosynthetic reaction.

A person who is not a member of the American Psychological Association (APA) may not use the title "psychologist" or "clinical psychologist" in the United States. However, some states do allow non-APA members to use the title "psychologist" if they are licensed by the state.
